WALTERS FOR JUSTICE.

In this issue of the Courier will be found the announcement of Chas. D. Walters for the Republican nomination for Justice of the Peace from Magisterial district No. 3.

Mr. Walters is a young man of splendid character and is a teacher and is well qualified for the office he seeks. If elected he would make a splendid official, being a young man who is sober and who would be active in trying to suppress violations of the law. The Republicans could find no finer type of man for their candidate.

The Courier bespeaks for him the careful consideration of the Republicans of the district.

E

CRISP FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

He asks us to state that he is for good roads, for free text books and for all the things that will benefit the country. He is a man of splendid character and if elected to the office to which he aspires he will make an efficient member.

The Courier bespeaks for his candidacy the earnest consideration of the Democrats of the county.

Fifth President's Son Still Living.

A lady living in the vicinity of Ellington received a letter from a friend located in Jacksonville, Fla., which brought the strange news that a son of the fifth president of the United States is still alive, at the age of nearly 106 years. The letter reads as follows:

The youngest son of James Monroe, president of the United States, lives here on the outskirts of Jacksonville, in a houseboat on the banks of the St. Johns river.

I walked out there three miles and back on March 9, to see him, and I feel amply paid for the trip. He has a good strong voice and I had quite a chat with him. He was born in Virginia, the son of President Monroe's third wife, on July 4, 1815 and will therefore be 106 years old if he lives until July 4, next.

He lives alone and does his own cooking, and is as active as most men at 50, has good teeth, reads without glasses and smokes a pipe. He has had three wives and thirteen children, but all are dead now. His last son was a sailor on the battleship Maine and went down with his ship in Havana harbor when it was sunk by the Spaniards.

He showed me a picture of sons and daughters, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to the sixth and seventh generations. He is a ship carpenter and did his share in the shipyards here during the World war. He fought in the Mexican war and in the war of the rebellion on the Confederate side; was a major in Stonewall Jackson's army.

There are millions of people in the United States who never heard of this remarkable man.—The Farmer City (Ill.) Journal.

Join the Agricultural Club.

Every boy and girl in Morgan county, between the ages of ten and eighteen years, may become a Junior Agricultural Club Member by agreeing to do one of the following things, keeping a complete record of all the work which they do:

Grow an acre of corn.

Grow one-eighth acre of potatoes. Raise the chickens from three or more settings of pure-bred eggs.

Grow one-half acre of alfalfa or sweet clover.

Raise a pig.

Grow one-half acre of soy beans or cowpeas.

Raise a dairy or beef calf.

And there are many other such things which agricultural club members may do, and are doing. Throughout Kentucky there are now more than twenty thousand boy and girl club-members who are doing useful, interesting and profitable work of this kind. There is still time to join the club, and now is a good time to plant an acre of corn, to sow cowpeas or soybeans, to set pure-bred eggs, or to start with a pig or calf. Many of the club members will plant the July potatoes, which are planted in July and mature by frost. Alfalfa or sweet clover will be sown late in August on soil prepared this summer.

Club members will be helped and instructed in their work by the county agent, and interesting bulletins and lessons. Each club member will be graded on the size of crop he produces, its cost, and the care with which he keeps account of his work in his record book. Neighborhood and county contests will be held and prizes given.

County winners in club work are usually given a trip to the State Fair, or some other reward well worth while. We want a large number of Morgan county boys and girls to join the Agricultural Club, but we want no one who will not begin his work in earnest, and do his best, both at his work and in keeping his records. We are going to organize a community club at your school house as soon as we can, but as the season is already getting late, you should start right away on the work that you want to do, and write to the County Agent at West Liberty that you want to join the club. Both boys and girls are equally welcome to join.

BOB RANKIN, County Agent.

Very Active in Prosecuting.

Courtesy Attorney John W. Coffey asks the Courier to say for him that he is very busy in attending the courts of the Justices in an effort to prosecute the violators of the law, and that he has not yet had time to get out to see the voters in regard to his candidacy, but that he considers his duty first and that he will continue to perform the duties of the office rather than to look after his private interests. He says that he was very warmly commended by the last grand jury for his activity in getting witnesses before the grand jury and in getting evidence from them.

He wants to urge his friends to keep at work, and says that from the encouragement he is receiving that he has no doubt of his success at the primary.

Base Ball.

Two and three weeks ago last Saturday, respectively, the Mize ball team came over and walked all over the High School team in both games, winning each of them easily.

On last Saturday the Ezel team came over, doubtless expecting an easy victory, but when they came it was the regular ball team that they played and they did not find it so easy. In fact they found them invincible. The West Liberty team had the visitors at their mercy all the time and defeated them in a score of 5 to 1.

The West Liberty team is now one of the best in the mountains and are looking for a few games with some of the best neighboring towns.

Now just a heart to heart talk with the voters of Morgan county. It is evident the good citizenship believes in law enforcement; in equity and justice being meted out to every man.

It is a conclusion by a great many of our citizens that the man who will enforce the law, and with undaunted vigor try to suppress crime, has no more show to be elected than a snowball to last in Hades. Such a conclusion is absurd and should not be harbored in the minds of intelligent people.

Let us study separately the lives of each aspirant for the various offices, weigh them in the balances and see if they are "sound writing" and cast your vote for a clean man. (If such there be on the ballot.)

If not, let the voters at the polls nominate a man and vote for him.

J. A. HALE.

The Chataqua will be here June 11, 13 and 14, and it seems to the Courier that the guarantors should get back with their campaign for a record attendance at once!

Menee county, one of the smallest and of the least wealth, voted a bond issue for good roads by a majority of 882. When the spirit that prevails in our little neighbor extends to the remainder of the mountain counties we will have good roads and prosperity.

The first and second issues of the Salyersville Independent, published at Salyersville by B. J. Elam and J. R. Fyffe, have reached our desk and shows up well as a country weekly.

Mr. Elam is a prominent young attorney of Salyersville and is editor of the paper, and Mr. Fyffe, a graduate of the Courier office, is manager and has charge of the mechanical end. These boys are deserving of success and if the people of Magoffin will stand by them they will give them a first-class newspaper.

BLANTON FOR JAILER.

In this issue of the Courier will be found the announcement of George W. Blanton for the Republican nomination for Jailer of Morgan county.

Mr. Blanton realizes the decided Democratic majority in the county, but has some claims that he thinks will appeal to the people. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and was a good soldier. But he authorizes the statement that if elected he will serve the people for the fees of the office and will not ask the five hundred dollars per year that is paid for the care of the public property. He says that if elected he will take care of the public property without pay for same, or for the fees of the office. He also announces that he will serve his term out and not let the office to others. He further appeals to the people as a poor man who has no means except as he earns it by manual labor and promises a faithful performance of the duties of the office.

The Courier bespeaks for him the careful consideration of the Republicans of the county.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

The editor of the Courier spent Saturday and Sunday in Jackson and found the same conditions prevailing that, in a greater or less degree, prevails over the State in regard to the liquor situation. There, as in many counties, the good citizens are protesting that the local authorities are making no effort to prevent the sale of liquor and that the traffic in moonshine is practically unhindered.

Many good citizens are discouraged and feel that it is almost hopeless to expect better things.

The good citizens of Breathitt county, of Wolfe county, of Morgan county, and of any other county can make themselves potent in the enforcement of the law this year by casting every other thing from them in their voting save their desire for good government, and elect only such men as can be depended upon to enforce the law. Next year they can not do this for it will be too late. This is the year that will decide whether or not we shall have law enforcement or four years of unbridled liquor selling. Regrets will not avail us if we elect men who will not enforce the law. This is the year of opportunity and if we fail to take the advantage we will be estopped by our own acts from complaining.

It is up to the good citizens what we shall have for the next four years.

"Oh, yes, that's it. Well, o' course I felt bad about the ol' man, but it wasn't no fault o' mine. Then it seemed like his shufflin' off put the cards right in my hands. It sure proved she was the girl—an' now she was left alone, it didn't look no awful hard job for me to shine up an' marry her, before everybody else got wise. Say, I had it all figured out when you an' Dan McCarthy horned in on that fool stunt o' yours, an' knocked me game galley-west. Then I cottedton onto that job with you. I didn't aim to stay out there punchin' steers, but just thought I'd see how things turned out. I sorter figured it this way—the girl she didn't care nothin' for you; she just married yer ter get out er there, ap' han' some place ter live; an' maybe, out there on the Cottonwood, I could make love to her, an' some day we'd skip out together. That's as far as I went at first, an' goin' out over them prairies, I got it into my head that she didn't have no objection to a little flirtation. I was feelin' quite foxy about it when we got to the ranch."

The lashes drooped low over Olga's eyes, and her cheeks burned.

"Then I reckon the devil must er took charge o' the game, fer the minute I was left alone out there I run into a bunch o' Indian cattle thieves. I knew two of 'em for they were out of the hole here, an' all at once, it struck me I might just as well have the job over with. I took it she didn't care about you, an' that a little strong arm stuff would pan out all right. It works with most women. I didn't have no notion then of bumpin' her off, Shelby, but the buck who took that job cracked you good an' hard. Well, that makes the whole story, don't it?"

He shut his eyes, his head falling back in complete exhaustion. Only his labored breathing proved that Macklin still lived. Olga held him motionless in her lap, bending over and softly smoothing back his hair with one hand. Shelby left them there, creeping out through the entrance onto the rock platform without.

It had ceased snowing, but enough had fallen to cover the bluff with a white mantle, obliterating the trail, and leaving the valley below covered. The sky arched over all dull and gray. Shelby hung out over the ledge, watchfully studying the view outspread beneath. It was a peaceful scene enough, with scarcely a moving figure visible. He could hardly realize that this was the haunt of outlaws, where only a few hours before he had been desperately struggling for life. The daylight revealed no sign of disorder or pursuit, the only reminder of what had occurred being the blackened ruins of the burned cabin almost directly below. Yet this was deserted and the snow about appeared untrampled. The sight gave him hope, yet he felt strangely depressed and unnerved. The remembrance of the scene just witnessed could not be cast off. He had no reason to question the truth of that occasion, and it had impressed him strongly. Macklin was evidently dying; was already beyond help. Any breath might prove to be his last, and it was even then too late for any doctor to save him. But would Pancha return in time to assist them? Would she bring sufficient help with her? In spite of the ominous quiet below he felt no faith that Indian Joe would so easily abandon their trail. He was not that kind. Something would assuredly arouse his suspicion that they had not perished in the flames. Indeed, that could be easily ascertained by a search of the debris, and the perturbed ranchman was far from being satisfied that Pancha along knew of this secret trail. Why, Macklin stated he had himself been up as far as the cave; and it was scarcely likely it had been entirely overlooked so long by these others—the Indians certainly must have scoured every inch of these bluffs at one time or another. Something, for the moment, may have drawn aside suspitions of his escape, yet those devils would

If he did that might account for his desperate eagerness to overcome what resistance they could offer before she returned. Yet probably not, for if he did know

EGOTISM

There are two different forms of egotism, one a commendable egotism and the other an egotism that makes the possessor and all around him unhappy.

The first kind is that egotism that recognizes the person's worth and insists upon recognition of that worth. A man who knows that he knows how to do something well has a right to, and ought to feel proud of his accomplishment. If he does not go to the extent of boring other people with his own laudation he is justified in bringing his accomplishments or his own powers to the notice of his associates. It is impossible for a man to be an adept in any vocation and not feel sensible of his power in that line, and such an egotism is perfectly rational.

There is another kind of egotist who makes his own life miserable and alienates those who would be his friends by imagining that his associates have all sorts of opinions about him. I did not know that this was egotism until I had my attention forcibly called to it by a preacher many years ago. This evangelist has created quite a sensation in a small town by his preaching, which in that day was considered very radical. I was sitting by him and engaged in a conversation when a member of his church came up to him and asked him: "Did you know that the members are talking very unpleasantly about you on account of your sermons?" I was surprised at the soft answer he gave, and after the dissatisfied man had left I asked the preacher if he did not feel concerned at the antagonism he was arousing. He smiled and said: "I never think of it. I am not the kind of egotist who imagines that he is important enough to be occupying the thoughts of the world. I do not think that, as an individual, I am a person who is of sufficient importance to be kept in the thoughts of the people. My affairs are too insignificant to cause the people to think of me often."

That was many years ago and it gave me a new perspective. Since that time I have observed people and met many who think themselves so important as to occupy the thoughts of their neighbors to the exclusion of everything else. That is a pitiful condition for any human being. When a person arrives at that point that he imagines every person who whispers in his presence is talking about him he has arrived at the parting of the ways between him and happiness. It is a morbid state of mind that feeds on the soul's unhappiness and grows more intense the longer it is indulged in. The truth is that the big wide world, and including the little parts of the world, have little time or inclination to dwell long upon the affairs of any one person. The world is too busy for one person's affairs to interest it long.

It is a species of egotism that approaches either hysteria or fanaticism. It is the growth of a morbid soul. Years ago when I was editing a newspaper in a town not far distant a very narrow minister started a crusade on some really harmless things, and suggested evils concerning them that the things themselves never indicated. So strongly did I feel in the matter that I published an editorial stating that the persons who heard the sermons received suggestions of evil that would never have occurred from the things he condemned. That is the condition of the misanthropic egotist. He is forever crediting to people about him opinions of him that his possessor is not constantly in the thoughts of his or her acquaintances. It is only when we learn how frequently our neighbors think of us that we learn to defy and disregard Mrs. Grundy. The person conscious of their own good purposes are rarely troubled with that disquieting belief that the world is holding a grudge against them.

Misanthropy in the child should be carefully cured by confidence and instruction. Teach him the men who have been really great are soon forgotten, and that only a few in the world's history have been of enough force to live long in the memory of the people. The world is good natured and kind when you have its attention, but you can't hold it long. It is too busy with its own affairs to care much of our individual affairs, and we are only gnawing a file when we become so egotistic as to think that we are the center of the stage in every performance or that the world keeps us in mind even to revile us. It don't.

Fear of Mrs. Grundy is usually the cause of this species of egotism. Did you ever observe a woman who felt that she deserved it leave a crowd of her kind and afterward make inquiries about what they said about her in her absence? A gossip never leaves a crowd without wondering what is said about her, when the chances are that more important things were talked about and she was not even thought of. But that particular brand of egotism can never understand that its possessor is not constantly in the thoughts of his or her acquaintances. It is only when we learn how frequently our neighbors think of us that we learn to defy and disregard Mrs. Grundy. The person conscious of their own good purposes are rarely troubled with that disquieting belief that the world is holding a grudge against them.

Most people call this misanthropy, but it is pure egotism. When a fellow gets the habit of pitying himself he is apt to get this disease. He falls into the habit of imagining his self a very much abused person and painting everything in the darkest colors. He imagines injury when none is intended and often when he is not in mind, and magnifies every act of others and mates his own life unhappy by brooding over imaginary things.

Cultivate the belief that this is a good old world and that it will treat us the best we will allow it to do, and we have solved the riddle of happiness. The world is to us as we look at it. It is only the reflection of our own souls. We see the world as we are. Humanity is just what we believe it to be—good or bad, according to our own conception of it. It gives back the treatment we accord to it.
